The Voice of Hope Audio Book Project was primarily produced by the remarkable generosity, deep human-kindness, and recording genius of Matthew Foxen, who, over the course of six months, patiently sat with me recording (and then meticulously editing) all 300 pages of the book, The Voice of Hope - Conversations with Aung San Suu Kyi. I am also deeply indebted to Shachi Estler - the owner of Global Sound Studios in Rose Bank, Australia - who generously provided the full use of her recording studio. To you both, I offer you my most humble gratitude as the project would not have happened without you.

I am also grateful to three of the key print publishers of The Voice of Hope; Dan Simon, Seven Stories Press, New York, Judith Kendra, Random House, London, and Fabienne Roussel of Editions Stock, Paris. Thank you for your generous support in agreeing to the importance of producing the audio book, as well as your support of Burma over the years.

I am particularly grateful to Jeff Hellman for his many months of painstaking work creating the stunning graphics for the Use Your Liberty website, as well as fine-tuning the audio recording itself. In addition, my gratitude to Chris Davidson for coding the site. And special thanks to Joe Smellow for his fine piano between chapters of the audio book.

In addition, I am indebted to Karen Zusman, Robert Pakenham, Leanne Palmer, Erin and Hugh Starr, and a number of other brave and generous individuals for providing the heart and resources to bring this vision to the world. Everyone who worked on this project did so to participate in a vision: to spread Aung San Suu Kyi's message of peace and reconciliation through dialogue and nonviolence throughout the world, to liberate the people of her country from oppression, and elevate the sanctity of universal human rights.

And to every person who downloads this remarkable audio and listens to the wisdom of Aung San Suu Kyi's views, I thank you from my heart. Moreover, I hope that you join her global revolution of the spirit and through your own voice of hope and action help free this compassionate world leader and her 2100 fellow political prisoners, including over 200 nuns and monks, so that they can speak with us all openly, freely and very soon.
